Biography

Amanda primarily handles civil litigation matters involving premises and professional liability. She defends individuals and business owners against claims of negligence ranging from trip and falls to more complex actions, working on matters from the early stages of discovery through appeals. Amanda also assists with matters involving toxic torts, representing clients in depositions, court conferences, and defense meetings.

She routinely represents clients at depositions; conducts legal research on a variety of issues; drafts pleadings, discovery responses, briefs, and motions as well as supporting memoranda; and assists in preparing matters for trial.
